I had some particular thoughts after viewing again a tv rerun of the movie Sunshine (1999). For Canadians of Hungarian background belonging to our generation, this movie needs no special introduction since it is a Robert Lantos movie. It is such a veridic representation that you can almost taste, smell and relive our past, recognising characters and "deja vu"s from our immediate families or acquaintances. To my surprise, I realised that on the other side of the ocean the movie is in totally undeserved obscurity.

I believe that many of our "temesvariak" would appreciate this masterpiece. The movie has a well seasoned cast (Ralph Fiennes, Rachel Weisz...), an exquisite photography and director. Well... I am not trying to pitch it... just want to share with those who did not know about it. It might help the failing memory of some of us....

While for myself the English version seemed more enjoyable, the Hungarian version seems more appropriate for it. It can be found at :
